

Nouns: activities

Activity 1: Read the text and identify all the common nouns. Write your answers in the table below the text.

Social work in the majority (developing) world and in post-colonial minority world countries like Australia, even in its most critical and participatory form, has been based on imported Euro-Western theories (Cossom cited in Gray & Fook, 2004, p. 626; Gilbert, 2001; Wilson, 1995). Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples were, and are, on the whole cast as those in extreme need of social services, education, housing, and child protection services and therefore have been, and are, the recipients of social work's practice, not active participants in its development. The fact that Indigenous Australians had lived highly successfully and harmoniously with and in their land since the Dreamtime and had developed extraordinary social and community skills is rarely acknowledged.

(Adapted from Green & Baldry 2008)

Answers

Activity 1

Social work in the majority (developing) world and in post-colonial minority world countries like Australia, even in its most critical and participatory form has been based on imported Euro-Western theories (Cossom cited in Gray & Fook, 2004, p. 626; Gilbert, 2001; Wilson, 1995). Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples were, and are, on the whole cast as those in extreme need of social services, education, housing, and child protection services and therefore have been, and are, the recipients of social work's practice, not active participants in its development. The fact that Indigenous Australians had lived highly successfully and harmoniously with and in their land since the Dreamtime and had developed extraordinary social and community skills is rarely acknowledged.

Activity 2

Social work in the majority (developing) world and in post-colonial minority world countries like Australia, even in its most critical and participatory form, has been based on imported Euro-Western theories (Cossom cited in Gray & Fook, 2004, p. 626; Gilbert, 2001; Wilson, 1995). Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples were, and are, on the whole cast as those in extreme need of social services, education, housing, and child protection services and therefore have been, and are, the recipients of social work's practice, not active participants in its development. The fact that Indigenous Australians had lived highly successfully and harmoniously with and in their land since the Dreamtime and had developed extraordinary social and community skills is rarely acknowledged.

References

Green, S & Baldry, E 2008, 'Building Indigenous Australian social work', Australian Social Work, vol. 61, no. 4, pp. 389–402.