

Attention 2nd and 3rd year students

Real Property Matters is looking for an Assistant Quantity Surveyor

The main role of an Assistant Quantity Surveyor is to inspect client's investment properties. The Quantity Surveyor meets with the tenants or owner of the property and then draws up a floor plan of the house and takes down details of all the depreciable items within the property. Over time the Assistant Quantity Surveyor will also learn how to price items and complete depreciation schedules.

The successful candidate will demonstrate the following experience, skills and attributes:

- An unrestricted driving license (must be able to drive a manual car)
- A high level of attention to detail - we're looking for a perfectionist here!
- Superior time management skills
- A friendly approachable personality
- Excellent communication skills
- Highly focused, well organised, self-motivated, and able to re-prioritise on the fly
- Some knowledge about tax depreciation would be advantageous but not essential.

The successful candidate in turn will be provided with the following:

- Thorough training and ongoing support
- A casual role (with a minimum of 12 hours per week) within a fantastic and supportive team
- Flexible working hours, which allow you to complete your studies
- The opportunity to contribute to a company experiencing substantial growth, with the possibility to attain a long term career once your studies are completed.

If you think you have what it takes to perform in this role and have the unrestricted right to live and work in Australia, please apply with a current resume and cover letter in word format to
